SUMMER VACATIONS FOR SHOPOIRLS.

A practical Summer charity, indeed, that instituted by the girls of a Stamford seminary, who have formed an association to provide annual outings of a fortnight each, during the warm season, to shopgirls of New York City. This year, twenty girls at a time will be brought to Stamford every fortnight and will have, at the Association's expense, two weeks of country air, country living and country pleasures. Hereafter, it is hoped to enlarge the scope of the enterprise, so that larger bands of girls can be out at once and that the aggregate of beneficiaries may be vastly increased.

To procure the funds for their great purpose, the seminary girls have sacrificed some pocket money and time, but the consciousness of the good results of their work will more than bring them recompense The time they gave was spent in the carrying out of entertainment projects by which hundreds of dollars were raised.
